

Egyptian authorities lifted all anti-COVID restrictions on entry into the country

Foreigners, including citizens of Russia, will be able to enter Egypt without tests and certificates

On June 16, 2022, the Egyptian government announced the lifting of all restrictions related to the coronavirus. This is reported by local media with reference to the Cabinet of Ministers of the country. These measures were lifted for both foreign nationals and Egyptians. The decision was made following a meeting of the Supreme Council of the Crisis Center for Combating Epidemics.

Now tourists do not need to present a vaccination certificate or negative PCR test results. From what date the restrictions are lifted, the official representative of the Egyptian Cabinet of Ministers did not specify.
