

Dubai, Abu Dhabi and Qatar lift all covid entry restrictions

Now, those entering Qatar and the two emirates of the UAE do not need to take tests and present vaccination certificates

Two of the emirates of the UAE - Dubai and Abu Dhabi - have returned entry rules to the pre-covid ones. Now, those entering these emirates no longer need to present vaccination certificates and PCR tests. For entry to the rest of the emirates, these requirements remain, but experts expect that they will also be lifted in the near future.

Test results and certificates will only be required for those traveling through these emirates in transit, if such requirements are imposed by the authorities of the countries of destination.

A little earlier, the Ministry of Health of Qatar also announced the removal of all existing restrictions. From November 01, 2022, before flying to Qatar, it is not required to take a PCR test or an antigen test, fill out a questionnaire on the website of the Ministry of Health of Qatar, and no longer need to install the Ehteraz mobile application upon arrival.
